

WHITWORTH

AN EDUCATION OF MIND AND HEART

Join Jerry in giving a latté or two to the Whitworth Fund and Espresso Delights will give you one back!

Dear Whitworth friends and colleagues:

A lot has changed at Whitworth since I started working here 15 years ago. Many of you may not know about (or choose to remember) the leaky roofs in the old HUB, the halls of Calvin, or the ugly carpet covering the floors of Dixon and other buildings on campus. Needless to say, it is breathtaking to see projects like Weyerhaeuser Hall completed, and a relief to see the older structures remodeled into state-of-the-art buildings. I have been proud to be a part of it.

With all these changes, one thing has always remained the same at Whitworth: our commitment to students. I have been fortunate to work with some of these gifted individuals, and as a father whose son attended Whitworth, I know that the professors are committed to engaging with their students in a way that Matt would not have experienced at a big university. So many students have thrived here and are drawn to Whitworth's great reputation, and a lot of that success boils down to money.

As much as I love my job, one of the hardest things is getting to know students who later leave Whitworth because they just can't afford it anymore. After encountering these students and knowing how much a Whitworth education costs, I have committed myself to give something back each month to the Whitworth Fund. I know that my contributions help the financial needs of students as well as the general improvement of the campus. Payroll deduction makes it easy for me to donate every month because I never see the money in the first place, but at the end of the year, I know I have done my part.

Each one of us is here to help our students succeed, which is why I am asking you to help in this additional way: join me in donating to the Whitworth Fund. A latté is something many of us indulge in weekly, even daily. But, if each of us redirected the funds for just a few of those a month to benefit the Whitworth Fund, we could be helping our students more than we ever have before.

Thanks for your consideration and have a very Merry Christmas!

Sincerely,

Jerry Paschall

P.S. If you are already a donor this year, or choose not to give, we'll still gladly give you a latté.
